By Dr. Gregory Stanton

Genocide eliminationism is the deliberate and systematic denial of genocide. It is a dangerous and destructive ideology that has been used to justify and perpetuate genocide throughout history. In this groundbreaking book, Dr. Gregory Stanton examines the history and consequences of genocide eliminationism, and challenges the dominant narratives that perpetuate this dangerous ideology.

Stanton argues that genocide eliminationism is a form of hate speech that is used to dehumanize and demonize entire groups of people. He shows how genocide eliminationism has been used to justify the Holocaust, the Rwandan genocide, and other atrocities. Stanton also shows how genocide eliminationism is used to silence survivors and prevent them from seeking justice.

Genocide eliminationism is a serious threat to human rights and international law. It is an obstacle to peace and reconciliation, and it perpetuates the cycle of violence. Stanton's book is a powerful call to action to challenge genocide eliminationism and to promote human rights and justice.
