About the Book

In 1979, Polish sailor Jerzy Suchocki embarked on a solo voyage across the Pacific Ocean. His dream of adventure soon turned into a nightmare when his yacht was capsized in a violent storm, leaving him stranded and alone in the unforgiving waters.

With only a meager supply of food and water, Suchocki faced unimaginable challenges. He battled hunger, thirst, hallucinations, and the relentless onslaught of the elements. Yet, amidst the adversity, he never lost hope.

Over the next 101 days, Suchocki's extraordinary resilience and determination were tested to their limits. He relied on his ingenuity, his unwavering belief in himself, and the kindness of strangers who crossed his path.

In this captivating memoir, Suchocki recounts his harrowing ordeal and the profound lessons he learned about survival, self-reliance, and the indomitable spirit of humanity.
