On March 12, 2018, US-Bangla Flight 211 crashed while attempting to land at Tribhuvan International Airport in Kathmandu, Nepal. The crash killed 51 people and injured 20 others.

The flight was carrying 71 passengers and crew members from Dhaka, Bangladesh to Kathmandu. The plane was descending through fog when it suddenly lost altitude and crashed into a field near the airport.

The crash was a devastating blow to the families of the victims and to the people of Nepal. It was the deadliest aviation accident in Nepal's history.

In the aftermath of the crash, there were many questions about what had happened. An investigation was launched to determine the cause of the crash.

The investigation found that the crash was caused by a number of factors, including pilot error, mechanical failure, and bad weather.

The pilot of the plane was making his first landing at Tribhuvan International Airport. He was not familiar with the airport or the surrounding terrain.

The plane was also experiencing mechanical problems. The flaps on the plane were not working properly, which made it difficult to control the plane's descent.

The weather was also a factor in the crash. The plane was descending through fog when it suddenly lost altitude. The pilots were unable to see the ground and they lost control of the plane.

The crash of US-Bangla Flight 211 was a tragedy. It was a reminder of the dangers of aviation and the importance of safety.

The survivors of the crash are heroes. They faced unimaginable challenges and they never gave up.

The survivors of the crash were taken to hospitals in Kathmandu. Many of them were critically injured. They had to undergo multiple surgeries and they spent months in rehabilitation.

The survivors faced many challenges. They had to deal with physical pain, emotional trauma, and financial hardship.

But they never gave up. They supported each other and they worked hard to rebuild their lives.

The survivors of the crash are an inspiration to us all. They show us that anything is possible if we never give up.
