About the Book

Writings Against War 1916 - 1945 by Rose Macaulay is a collection of essays, poems, and articles that speak out against the horrors of war. Macaulay was a prolific writer and journalist who witnessed firsthand the devastation of both World Wars. Her writings on war are passionate and eloquent, and they offer a powerful indictment of the futility and brutality of war.

The book is divided into three sections. The first section, "The Great War," contains essays and articles written during World War I. In these writings, Macaulay describes the horrors of trench warfare, the suffering of civilians, and the psychological toll of war on soldiers. The second section, "The Interwar Years," contains essays and articles written between the two world wars. In these writings, Macaulay warns of the dangers of fascism and militarism, and she calls for peace and reconciliation.

The third section, "The Second World War," contains essays and articles written during World War II. In these writings, Macaulay describes the devastation of the war, the suffering of the Jewish people, and the need for a just and lasting peace. Throughout the book, Macaulay's writing is marked by her deep compassion for the victims of war, her clear-eyed understanding of the causes of war, and her unwavering commitment to peace.
